

Anthropology | BEYOND COLUMBIA

Studying Anthropology prepares me to . . .

Recognize the subjectivity of experience across cultures

Analyze individuals, objects, texts, and social phenomena through an anthropological lens

Collect and synthesize qualitative and/or quantitative data from fieldwork, ethnography, and secondary sources

Articulate key theoretical debates in the history of the discipline

Design and conduct comparative research projects

Write clear, organized, and persuasive texts

Clearly explain and present ideas and information orally

Consider ethical concerns around ethnographic study and research

Draw connections across cultures

Carefully document and cite sources
